Eastern Division Pre Season Prediction- 3rd place

Carmen Salvino and Morrie Oppenheim signed late with the Broncos and in doing so considerably boosted the club's prospects. Sanford's lineup now looks like a good bet to challenge for the top. There is experience in Elkins, Jack Aydelotte, Salvino, J. B. Solomon, Jack Biondolillo, Eddie Brickell and Oppenheim.

These men are all young enough yet to have their best years ahead, particularly Biondolillo and Oppenheim, a youthful pair raised to big time competition by Buddy Bomar. Youthful experience and its complement, a spirited confidence, are going to make the Broncos as hard to handle as their namesake. Biondolillo and Oppenheim particularly should be tough after spending time under Bomar's tutelage on the rugged Chicago scene and all around the national circuit. Brickell, challenged only by Billy Myers of Los Angeles as top lefty, provides the club with added insurance. Ronnie Diamond is young looks mighty good at times, but has to gain consistency.

The Broncos lost a surefire asset before the season started when Stan Gifford had to pull out for some needed medical attention. Even without Gifford, though, Curtis Sanford is going to have a tough club, one that should be in the pennant fight to the finish.
